

Rebecca Weitzel

Chief People Officer

About Me:

I've built my career around helping people and organizations grow. I'm currently the Chief People Officer at Hilltop Community Resources, where I lead HR, Learning & Development, Marketing, and IT. My path has taken me from hands-on people work to shaping culture and strategy across the whole organization. What I love most is helping others uncover their potential—especially through leadership development, emotional intelligence, and building workplaces where people feel they truly belong. I believe growth happens when we stay curious, have honest conversations, and lead with both courage and care.

Hobbies and Interests

Outside of work, I love being outdoors hiking or paddle boarding. I'm also a lifelong learner and love reading, especially about leadership, psychology, and human behavior. Most of all, I enjoy spending time with family and friends, sharing good food, wine, laughter, and meaningful conversations.

Fun Facts

I'm a proud member of the Cherokee Tribe and an at-large citizen of the Cherokee Nation, meaning I'm a citizen who lives outside the reservation. My heritage is an important part of who I am. It grounds me in resilience, connection, and the belief that we grow stronger when we lift each other up. That perspective shapes how I lead and mentor, always remembering that none of us succeed in this life alone.

Why I Mentor:

To me, mentoring is about creating a space for honest conversation, reflection, and growth. I chose to be a mentor because I've been fortunate to have people in my own career who helped me see possibilities I couldn't see on my own. I hope to offer that same kind of support—helping others clarify their goals, build confidence, and find their voice as leaders. I also believe mentoring is a two-way street; every conversation is a chance for me to learn something new and stay connected to what's emerging in our organization.