

TJ VanRoosendaal

Director, Community Programs

About Me:

I am a values-centered leader who balances compassion with clarity, creativity with structure, and reflection with action. My leadership style builds trust, strengthens relationships, and cultivates an environment where people feel both supported and inspired to grow.

Hobbies and Interests

I enjoy Mountain Biking, Fishing, and my family. I have 2 kids who are crazy active in sports and that eats all of my extra time.

Why I Mentor:

I want/choose to be a mentor because I feel as though I have a natural ability to create trust and psychological safety, allowing others to share openly and learn without fear of judgment. I have a strong sense of organization and follow-through ensuring that guidance is not only supportive but also actionable. I have a combination of emotional intelligence, creativity, and commitment to personal and professional growth that makes me the kind of mentor who both inspires and empowers others to reach their potential. Plus I love learning people's stories.

Fun Facts

My favorite quote is from Theodore Roosevelt, "The Man in the Arena." I try to live my life by this quote.
